

Newsletter of the Kaho'olawe Island Reserve -- Winter Solstice 2014

Letter from the Director

by Michael K. Nāho'opi'i, Executive Director

The upcoming 2015 legislative session will be the Kaho'olawe Island Reserve Commission's most important in its 21-year history.

In this time span, the KIRC has led the restoration of the island of Kaho'olawe on behalf of both the State and the people of Hawai'i, oversaw the Navy's decade-long unexploded ordnance cleanup project in order to ensure meaningful and reasonably safe areas for future inhabitants, and developed long-term plans for the best use and management of Reserve lands and waters.

Since the 2004 departure of the U.S. Navy and concurrent transfer of the Reserve's access management from Federal to State hands, the KIRC has focused on healing centuries of environmental damage. Subjected to 200 years... READ MORE. pledged to provide for the meaningful and safe use of Kaho'olawe for the purpose of the traditional and cultural practices of the native Hawaiian people and to undertake the restoration of the island and its waters. Its mission is to implement the vision for Kaho'olawe Island in which the kino (body) of Kaho'olawe is restored and na poe o Hawai'i (the people of Hawai'i) care for the land. The organization is managed by a seven-member Commission and a committed staff of 18.

About the Reserve

Decimated of its natural environment through years of over foraging and military bombing, an estimated 1.9 million tons of soil is lost annually on Kaho'olawe to erosion. Severely eroded landscapes cover one-third of the island, with runoff choking the Reserve's pristine reefs and significantly impacting the ocean ecosystem. The Reserve's inventory of 3,000 historic sites and features - all part of the National Register of Historic Places - are in constant need of protection from these damaging circumstances. Despite an extensive, 10-year cleanup by the Navy, unexploded ordnance litter one-third of the island plus all surrounding waters, leaving areas off-limits and life-threatening.
